Kilmainham jail could be demolished - but Dublin council blocked the move Nearly 30 years after a prison within a prison was built, the Department of Justice has announced plans to demolish the centre within the Kilmainham Gaol. The building, referred to locally as the town jail, houses up to 200 men in four large cells, accompanied by a segregation unit, while a rooftop has three cots to sleep on. John Brennan, the Minister of State for Justice, has called for the department to develop an emergency plan to remedy the lack of capacity in the Dóchas Aodha Gaelach, an Irish language-based immigration and detention service. Following the consultation on the Building Plan for Kilmainham Jail (2018) as part
